CURRENCY VIEWS
TO CONGRESSMEN*PRESENTS VIEWS PERSONALLY
AT JOINT SESSION
TODAY.*TALKS NINE MINUTES*Is Direct and to the Point in What

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, June 23.—Hopeful that this would be the last week of preliminary consideration of the tariff bill, the senate democratic caucus resumed work early today. Changes in the metal schedule partly approved Saturday night came up first, but the caucus was forced to close at noon so that the senators might assemble in the house to hear President Wilson deliver his address on currency reform. Senator Simmons, who introduced the measure, said that the revision of the income tax and administrative features would be submitted later today.

Gifford Pinchot's plan for a national river commission was introduced in congress today by Representative Temple of Pennsylvania as a progressive party measure. Senators, representatives, governors, heads of waterways improvement and conservation organizations and various government officials would compose it, all serving without pay. Flood prevention, stream pollution, water power and like subjects would be taken up. A national river commission would be created by congress to revise the banking and currency laws that business may be aided in meeting revision. President Wilson for the second time went to the house to personally read his message on the subject to both houses of congress assembled in joint session.

Vice President Marshall appeared at the head of the senators, marching two by two just after 12:30. The vice president took a seat beside Speaker Clark and the senators took the seats in the front rows of the senate chamber.

Speaker Clark announced Representative Underwood, Fitzgerald and Mann as members of the committee to escort President Wilson to the chamber. The president, accompanied by Secretary McAdoo and Secretary Wilson, were the first to take seats reserved for the cabinet members. Secretary Houston and Secretary Taft were seated next to the president.

President Wilson motored to the capitol through a steady downpour of rain accompanied only by Secretary Tumulty and a secret service man. The president, wearing a dark suit and a top hat, was met by the joint committee and escorted to the rostrum in the hall. Just before one o'clock the speaker rose and called the chamber and shouted: "The president of the United States." The president in the galleries and on the floor arose as the president walked in front of the speaker's box and a nod and a smile from the president and the vice president and the speaker's desk. The president mounted the steps to the clerk's desk.

I present to the 63d congress the president of the United States," announced Speaker Clark.

Addressing first the two presiding officers, the president turned to the desk and in a low, even voice, that was never raised, but which penetrated clearly to every ear in the chamber, began reading his message. Not a stir from the audience interrupted. At 1:10 the president finished reading the message and left the rostrum. The speaker then called the chamber and shouted: "The president of the United States." The president in the galleries and on the floor arose as the president walked in front of the speaker's box and a nod and a smile from the president and the vice president and the speaker's desk. The president mounted the steps to the clerk's desk.

Although short of some of the novelty that attended his first appearance in the senate chamber, the president's address was of more than a century, to-day's visit of the president to congress took on a deeper significance. On his first visit he delivered a message that anticipated the future of the country. On his first visit he delivered a message that anticipated the future of the country.

It is perfectly clear that it is our duty to supply the new banking and currency system the country needs and that it will immediately be more than ever," said President Wilson. "Shall we hasten to change our tariff laws and then be heard about it? WISCONSIN VETERANS
ARE MINUS PULLMANS*Three Hundred Soldiers to Attend
Gettysburg Celebration May
Have to Ride in Day
Coaches.*[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., June 23.—The Wisconsin soldiers desiring to attend the fiftyth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg next week may be required to travel to Chicago in day coaches, because according to the railroad commission, the Pullman Company has broken its agreement to furnish sleepers in any number in Madison and Milwaukee. Governor McGovern and Colonel John Salsman called upon the railroad commission today to intercede and the commission has asked the Pullman company for specific reasons why it declines to furnish cars.

Pullman sleepers are generally operated over the Northwestern line. The St. Paul company furnishes its own sleepers. The states of Iowa, Minnesota and North Dakota passed laws early in the session to pay the expenses of leading all soldiers in the state to the fiftyth anniversary of the battle. So many requisitions were made to the St. Paul company for sleepers that the supply was exhausted when the bill was passed in Wisconsin. The St. Paul company made an agreement with the New York Central lines for the furnishing of sleepers, but when the requisition was made last week by John Priebe, St. Paul agent, the request was denied. The company will furnish the sleepers in Chicago, but will not send them into Wisconsin.

As most of the veterans are over 70 years of age the St. Paul company insists that the cars be furnished so that the soldiers will not be required to travel to Chicago in day coaches. The railroad commission expects an answer to its request sometime today.

Over 400 veterans from Wisconsin will attend the anniversary. Of this number 32 will come to Madison and Milwaukee over the Northwestern lines and the remainder travel to these starting places over the St. Paul line.

The tour will begin next Saturday. Three days, July 2, 3 and 4 will be spent on the battle field of Gettysburg and the return trip will be made the evening of July 4th and 5th. The Wisconsin veterans will be accompanied by Governor McGovern, Colonel John Salsman, John Priebe, local St. Paul agent, and a local passenger agent for the St. Paul road, will accompany the party to see that Wisconsin passengers are well taken care of. The health of Senator Bishop, the author of the plan before the Wisconsin legislature, he will be unable to attend.

Whether or not the crown had any new witnesses to present was not known, but it was understood that further testimony would be elicited from surgeons who already had testified for the prosecution.

Neither counsel would venture any predictions as to the ultimate conclusion of the jury of six, who with Chief Justice Harvey of the Alberta supreme court, presiding, are hearing the case.

PEA CANNERS SOLVE PROBLEMS OF LABOR*Factories Resume Operation Under Schedule That Complies With Law Regulating Women's Hours.*[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., June 23.—After two years of costly attempts to comply with the letter and spirit of the law limiting hours of labor of women to ten hours per day, the pea canning industry of Wisconsin has obtained relief. During the present season, which begins this week, the canners will work under a scientific time schedule approved by the state industrial commission. The schedule permits a longer work day when conditions beyond human control require an extension of the period of employment. Heretofore the law has not contained provisions which recognized so-called acts of God, sudden rainstorms or other phenomena beyond human control.

The schedule is based on an exhaustive investigation carried on during the 1912 season. The results will appear in a bulletin of the United States government.

The special orders for the 1913 season just issued by the industrial commission are based upon last year's inquiry, the results of this inquiry having been held before a special committee, which was organized to recommend special orders for adoption by the commission. These special orders are permitted under a new law, passed by the present legislature, which since election day has been in effect. The law is intended to secure complete records of the business this season. These figures will be tabulated and further investigation will be made in order that the state government may be equipped to deal with the situation next year and in seasons following.

Easy to Remove and Can Be Used Over and Over Again.
Have you ever tried a cap out of a milk bottle without wondering why some one did not invent a better kind? Well, a Pennsylvania man has done so. This cap consists of a top and bottom layer of cardboard with a layer of muslin or wire gauze between. This makes a rigid disk that can be washed and used over and over again by the milkman. It is also absolutely air-tight and dust-proof. But the feature that appeals most to the general public is the ease with which it

FLAP LIFTS UP IN CENTER.
It may be removed. In the center of the top layer of cardboard is a little biscuit flap that can be lifted up with the finger nail and that affords a center pull on the cap. By means of this the disk can be taken out without sending it and without wetting the fingers. Such a permanent cap affords great possibilities for advertising, with a key phrase beneath the flap.

In New Law Which Allows Additional Aid to Graded Schools Teaching Agriculture and Industrial Subjects.
There are a number of school districts in Rock county that may be in line for $100 annual state aid to rural graded schools where agriculture and some industrial subjects are taught in courses approved by the state superintendent of schools. The law passed by the legislature in session and is for the purpose of encouraging the systematic teaching of the rural schools, especially those that are organized and equipped in such a manner to handle the subjects with facility. Among schools in Rock county that may qualify for the money are Fulton, Shepley, Milton, Milton Junction, Aiton, Lind and Hanover.
Among new regulations affecting the rural schools, the annual report of the school clerk and the annual census reports shall be made to the county directly instead of the state superintendent of schools. This is calculated to prevent delay and promote accuracy in the reports. The blanks for these reports will be sent out from the state superintendent's office. At the county superintendent's office, who will supply the various district clerks.

C. O. D. PARCEL POST SUPPLIES RECEIVED

Local Postoffice Ready to Take Care of New Feature Which is Installed July 1st.
Postmaster C. L. Valentine has received the supplies necessary for the C. O. D. system which will be applied to the parcels post and the local post office force will be ready to put the plan into operation on July 1st, when the order becomes effective in all money order postoffices of the country. It is anticipated that the new ruling will mean extra work for the postoffice clerks, as the cash on delivery plan will doubtless be popular with merchants and consumers.
According to the details of the system the sender may have the price of the article sent and the charges thereon collected from the addressee upon post stamps to be affixed to the package. Packages whose contents are over $100 in value will not be accepted, and the packages are insured for safe delivery up to $50 in value. Parcels may be accepted by rural delivery and the receipt to be given the sender shall be sent to him after the parcel is numbered and listed at the postoffice.
Each parcel has three tags, in three parts—first, a receipt, to be torn off and given to the sender; second, a file tag, to be kept in the office where it is mailed; and third, the parcel tag accompanying the package to its destination. The sender shall fill in as many items on the C. O. D. tag as possible, including the amount due him, and place his name and address on the back of the coupon, which is retained by the mailing office.

MOOSE BAND PLAYS AT BIG CONVENTION

Moose Band From Here Plays at Big Band Convention Held Saturday and Sunday at Watertown.
Five extra passenger coaches were necessary to accommodate the people going to the annual band convention held at Watertown Saturday and Sunday. The Moose band from here was one of the nine bands represented. It was expected that there would be about 100 bands to share in the entertainment but on Sunday there were only nine in the parade. The big feature of the convention was the parade as all the bands consolidated to one so there were several hundred musicians playing at the same time.
The Moose band received many favorable comments and established a reputation for themselves. Since the organization of the Moose band wonderful success has been made and their services have been much in demand. On the fourth they are to play at Beloit.
On July 25th and 26th the band will go to Chicago to take part in the dedication of the Moose Band School at Moose Hart. Many prominent speakers are to give addresses at the dedication including President Woodrow Wilson, William J. Bryan and Harrison Johnson of California.

LINK AND PIN NORTHWESTERN WILL RUN SPECIAL TRAIN

Officials to Run Special Train from Chicago to Here for Employees Along Route to Attend Meeting.
Planning to give all employees possible a chance to attend the big safety first rally that the Northwestern will run a special train from Chicago to Janesville Wednesday, to pick up employees between Chicago and this city, and will arrive in Janesville immediately after the entertainment.
The main object of this mass meeting is to interest the public in the railroad fight against accidents. An excellent program including motion pictures and music by the theatre orchestra has been arranged and the public are cordially invited to attend.
The movement towards the reduction of accidents was started three years ago and since then has grown into one that has attracted world-wide attention. One of the first men to see the benefit of such a crusade was Ralph C. Richards and was authorized by the officials of the company to plan the movement as he saw fit. After a year's work the accidents to employees were reduced at least twenty-five per cent and at the present time they are only a minimum. Mr. Richards did not stop with protecting the workmen of the road but has started working for more stringent trespassing laws and for the safety of the general public. The danger and enormous number of deaths each year that result from careless traveling.
The public will undoubtedly be well interested in the entertainment which begins at 8:55, as R. C. Richards, general chairman of the Northwestern safety first committee and founder of the movement, will give an address. There will be also short speeches by Hon. James A. Pathers, W. D. Cantillon, general manager of the Northwestern road, and members of the Wisconsin safety first committee.
The Wisconsin division is one of the banner divisions in respect to the low number of accidents out of the entire Northwestern system. In 1911 they won the safety first banner, which the officials of the division having the least number of accidents during the year and in 1912 they made a close bid for it, getting second place. The employees in Janesville have taken a keen interest in the work and all have been enthusiastic of their record.
C. W. Daily, chairman of the Wisconsin division safety committee, ex-man from both local roads, has been given instructions to wire how many employees can go from each station.
Wednesday afternoon the officials of the central safety committee are to hold a business meeting at the Y. M. C. A. and a banquet will be served in the new auditorium at six o'clock.

Chicago and Northwestern.
Three extra passenger sections of train number 509 were scheduled yesterday to accommodate immigrants from Chicago going to Duluth. The first section went through at 4:45 A. M. and the other two passed through Janesville during the night.
As a result of an investigation by the freight traffic department in the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, which discloses that there have been large annual losses by damage claims arising in connection with the transportation of freight in less than car load lots, special instructions to use more cars have been issued to employees. Although the less-than-carload freight tonnage last year was only 5.7 per cent of the total tonnage and the revenue accruing from it 21 per cent of the aggregate, the loss and damage to this class of freight was 53.7 per cent of the whole.

GUARANTY FUND IS FULLY EXPLAINED

Directors of the Commercial Club Met This Noon and Discussed Matters of Interest.
President James S. Fifield presided at the weekly Monday meeting of the Commercial club of the Hotel Myers today. Several reports were made by Secretary Lane and Chairman A. P. Lovejoy of the committee investigating the guaranty fund idea, was asked for a report. He was not ready to make a full report, but gave some of the information thus far secured. He read a letter from the Board of Trade, Williamsport, Pa., which has been secured by the committee. The fund was also presented. Williamsport is a city of 40,000 people and the guaranty fund has been very successfully handled. The letter follows:
Referring to your inquiry regarding the $500,000 guaranty fund of this Board of Trade, beg to say:
1st: This fund is a subscription of credit, not cash.
2nd: The banks of Williamsport were first interested, after the plan was completed, the subscribers followed members of the Board of Trade subscribing to the first fund of $215,000, which contract expired December 4, 1905, to the second fund of $215,000, which contract expired December 4, 1910, and to the third fund of $500,000, now in force, which contract extends from December 5, 1910, to December 5, 1915.
3rd: The amount agreed upon by the subscribers, the subscribers were called together and elected three of their number attorneys-in-fact who, by the terms of the agreement, were empowered to endorse for them during the life of the contract.
4th: Copies of contract with certified action of subscribers in electing attorneys-in-fact were filed with the banks.
5th: The attorneys-in-fact are authorized to endorse for the whole or any part of the $500,000, their total endorsements, at any one time, of course, not to exceed the total amount of the subscription.
6th: The attorneys-in-fact can endorse for such persons only, whose application for a loan has been approved by the executive committee of the Williamsport Board of Trade, and such application is in writing to the attorneys-in-fact.
7th: The attorneys-in-fact, as representatives of the subscribers, have discretionary power, in that while they can endorse only on the recommendation of the executive committee of the Board of Trade, they may decline to make such approved loan should they consider it unwise. These bodies, however, have worked together in matters of this kind where there was a possibility of making a loan.
8th: An applicant for a loan files his application with the executive committee, which investigates the proposition thoroughly and if satisfied, refers the application to the attorneys-in-fact with the committee's recommendation that the loan be made.
9th: The attorneys-in-fact, after verifying the statements of the applicant and satisfying themselves that favorable action is desirable, endorse the application, which is then referred to the executive committee of the Board of Trade, which, if satisfied, will endorse the application and the bank which will furnish the money.
10th: If the applicant meets his obligation as agreed upon in the subscription, as will be noted by the knowledge of any transaction.
11th: If the applicant fails to meet his obligation, the subscriber must pay to the bank whatever deficit exists.
12th: No subscriber is liable for more than his proportionate share and, after a loan has been made, if any subscriber to the fund becomes financially embarrassed to the extent of his being unable to pay his proportion of this loss, the bank is liable for this proportion. For example, a $10,000 subscriber to the present fund of $500,000 is therefore liable for more than one-fifth hundredth part of a loss incurred under the fund, now in force.
13th: If by reason of death or failure of a subscriber or subscribers, the total $500,000 is reduced to a less amount, the committee has the privilege of securing any new subscribers to the contract to keep the fund up to its original amount.
The weekly gatherings were postponed until September 15th, and meetings until then will be held on call of the secretary.

ENACT A STRINGENT PURE SEED MEASURE

Governor McGovern Affixes Signature to Bill Drawn by Prof. R. A. Moore—Labeling Required.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., June 23.—A stringent law regulating the sale of fraudulent seeds in the state has just been signed by Gov. McGovern. The bill was drawn by Prof. R. A. Moore of the agricultural experiment station and requires the exact labeling of the purity of the seeds on each container, napier of the agricultural department are required to collect samples of seeds on the open market and to prosecute in the name of the state those against whom evidence of dishonesty and fraud is secured.
"Dealers who are testing their own seeds shall be required to submit samples thereof to the experiment station for retesting upon the demand of the inspector," says the law. "Should the guarantees shown on the dealer's label not be substantially equivalent to the actual value of the seed, as determined by the experiment station, the dealer shall be subject to prosecution and penalty."
The hearing on this bill disclosed the fact that many thousands of dollars are annually wasted in Wisconsin in the purchase of non-germinating seed, but that thousands of acres of ground are seeded to foul seeds by dealers who have not been tested. At one time it was proposed to make a legislative investigation of this subject as the number of frauds discovered assured such importance. A new duty has been placed upon the school m'ams. Hereafter in Wisconsin public schools the subject of manners, the right and wrong, rectitude of life and morals will be taught. The governor has signed the Vietnam bill intended to accomplish this purpose.
Assemblyman Ringler's bill to permit supervisors to serve as aldermen was also received and approved. In all cities of the second, third and fourth class the common council may by an ordinance adopted by a two-thirds vote of all of its members, provide that in addition to one alderman from each ward the supervisor may serve as an alderman. He signed the Meland bill permitting the people to elect members of the school board in cities of the second, third or fourth classes, whether operating under a general or special charter.

A NEW CONTINENT.

Scarcely had it been officially announced that Commander Peary had annexed the North Pole for the United States and that Amundson had taken possession of the South Pole for Norway, that plans were laid for the discovery of a new continent where lived the blonde Eskimos, by Stefansson.

"Captained by Bartlett, who navigated Peary on his way to the north pole, the steam whaler Karikuk, with the Stefansson party of Arctic experts and naturalists on board, has just left Victoria, B. C., for a three years' cruise in Pacific and polar waters. The goal is the exploration and definition of an Arctic continent, which may be added to British North America," says the Christian Science Monitor. "Hence the ample financial support and patronage now given the American discoverer of the blonde Eskimos by the Canadian government. Seldom if ever has an expedition of this kind set forth with better equipment in men and supplies, the Dominion government wisely deciding that generosity to the explorers and trust in the leader would lead to plans from which maximum of results must follow. Stefansson, in his far-sighted statement to the public, makes it clear that the governing motive with him and with his associates is not fame, but rather extension of the bounds of knowledge. Moreover it is knowledge of a somewhat unusual kind which is to be won if possible. For, as he says, of no other similar area of the world is so little known as the million or so square miles that lie between Alaska and the north pole. Fifteen trained naturalists, working three winters and four summers in this region, plan to bring back a body of information that in volume and variety will equal if not surpass that which is forthcoming as the result of recent Antarctic explorations. The highest Victorian provincial official in suitable formal newsmongers of good will and confidence as the expedition made ready for the voyage and set off on its fine quest. It was in this fashion and with much the same high resolves that seventeenth century explorers of many races set forth to find the North America, whose twentieth century Caucasian conglomerate is well represented in the crew and leadership of the Karikuk. But of that power with which both to combat and explore nature, how vast the increase for the twentieth century navigator and explorer as compared with him of the seventeenth!"

Last winter pedestrians over a certain street plowed through snow, slipped on ice and generally were discomforted by the lack of attention to the sidewalk. When spring came, the grass started and one day the neighbors were surprised to see a man work for three hours, at thirty cents an hour, digging weeds out of this same walk, a far affair that should have been condemned long ago. If the same money had been expended last winter to clean the walk there would have been no complaint at all, but it looks very inconsistent just now to those who suffered during the cold weather.

There are any number of housewives who do not appreciate the great value of putting "tar" on the streets. It is such a sticky mass to get rid of and every day's sun seems to make it stickier than ever, and it does track into the people's houses so, and as for the children's clothes? Oh, my words fail to express their indignation. Too bad women do not have a vote on the question of the next street commissioner.

With no real issue at stake, but simply to recall Mayor Fathers because he has done his duty, the days for the coming primary merrily approach. Meanwhile the two aspirants for the nomination to oppose Mr. Fathers are making a personal campaign of it and the result will be almost as good as a regular election.

The question of building a bridge and at what kind of a bridge, across Rock river at Milwaukee St. will be voted on the same day the mayorality primary comes. It is a question that everyone is interested in and the vote for issuing the bonds should be overwhelming so that work can be started at once.

Both the police and fire departments were handicapped recently by resignations of old officers. Gradually new material is being tried out and both departments will soon be above their old standard of efficiency.

Janesville does not officially celebrate the Fourth of July this year, but several adjacent cities do and there will be races at the Park Association track so no one need slight the day for lack of amusement.

Wednesday promises to be a busy day for Janesville residents. What with auto races at the fair grounds and the hearing on the bridge question at the city hall, it will be hard which amusement to choose between.

In view of their recent performances, one can't help wondering what the "conservative business interests" of Wall street would do if they encountered a scarecrow from an upstate cornfield.

GRIT.

The runner who pounds ahead and strains to his very utmost on the last lap, making still an extra spurt, though the world goes black and the sky reels, exemplifies the quality needed for winning any race.

He has grit. The man who in the midst of his ruined fortunes pulls himself together and starts all over again, determined to pay every dollar he owes and to win back all he has lost and then some, reveals the same quality.

He has grit. It is said that "God hates a coward." He also hates a quitter.

Sand is used by the engine driver to make his wheels stick to the track. Sand is also needed by the individual man to make him stick to the track.

The man who is a good loser is liable in the end to be a good winner. He doesn't whine over his temporary defeat, but makes ready for the next bent.

He has grit. The race is not to the swift alone nor the battle to the strong. It is to those who never let go.

In a race between grit and brilliancy grit may fall behind at the start, but will be found at the front on the last lap, and it is the last lap that counts.

Sir Walter Scott was a great novelist who charmed and is yet charming the world. Yet he was never greater than when in his great financial failure he buckled to work to retrieve his ruined fortunes.

He won because he had grit. Mark Twain was perhaps the foremost humorist in the world's history. He made all nations happier. Yet Mark Twain was more. He repeated the feat of Sir Walter Scott, and to the world's appreciation and laughter was added respect.

It was a tribute to his grit. The man who wins is the one who does not stop at one rebuff or a hundred. In fact, he does not stop at all.

He has grit.

Ash Heap for Grandma. A certain little fellow loves his grandmother dearly. The other day, hearing her talk, perhaps a bit mournfully, of growing old, the child was much troubled. WATER WORKS CASE DECISION EXPECTED

City Awaits Ruling of Railroad Commission on Question of Legality of Municipal Ownership

Whether the electors of the city of Janesville shall be required to vote on a second time on the question of the municipal ownership of the water works plant, will be decided in a ruling expected this week from the state railroad commission, before which a hearing was held early in the month.

The question involved as raised by the attorneys for the Janesville Water company was in regard to the legality of the form in which the matter was submitted to the people. The question as voted upon read: "Shall the city of Janesville purchase the Janesville Water company?" This form of presenting the issue, the water company claims was illegal and not in conformance with the terms of the public utilities law.

The city contended before the commission, that while the city might have committed a technical error in the form of the question, there was no doubt in the minds of the voters as to what they were voting upon, and that consequently the commission should allow the matter to stand and not annul the result of the election.

Should the ruling of the commission go against the city the issue will doubtless be correctly presented for a vote at one of the other of the elections to be held next month, according to Mayor James A. Fathens this morning. "The city has no disposition to engage in a legal controversy," declared Mr. Fathens, "and I believe that another vote will be the simplest solution should the commission decide against us. Ten days is sufficient time for filing notice of the question to be submitted. The commission's ruling is due now, as the briefs of counsel have been filed."

Much has already been done on the part of the city toward the purchase of the water works plant. The commission has made a physical valuation of the plant and has been made to agree on a price and on the terms of sale. In case the commission should decide for the city the negotiations will be continued with all the dispatch possible.

HANDS DOWN OPINION IN HORNE WILL CASE

Judge Grimm Rules That Case be Remanded to County Court—Plaintiff Must Pay Costs of Action.

Judge George Grimm of the Circuit Court this morning filed an opinion with the Clerk of the Court, Jesse C. Earle, affirming the judgment of the County Court in the matter of the will of Harriet Horne, deceased, and ordering that the case be remitted to that court for further proceedings according to the law and the terms and provisions of the will. The executor of the will, James A. Fathens, was ordered to recover from Edward S. Horne, administrator of the estate of William Horne, $74 for costs and disbursements.

An opinion was also filed today in the case of C. C. McDowan et al versus John Paul, the same being the case, taxable in the matter of the plaintiff's motion to tax the action of costs. It is held that the motion for costs relating to the motion for an injunction order, which were disallowed by the clerk, are in the facts in this case, taxable in the matter of the plaintiff's motion to tax the action of costs. VISITS JANESVILLE AFTER THIRTY YEARS

George H. Strout, Former Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Man, Returns Acquainted.

George H. Strout of Portland, Oregon, is spending a few days in the city after an absence of thirty odd years. Old time residents will remember Mr. Strout as one of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway men associated with William B. Noyce back in the 70's. He continued in the transportation business for a number of years after going to Portland, and then associated himself with the North Pacific Lumber Company. Mrs. Strout was formerly Miss Emma Chase. She is now in Germany with one of her daughters, who has been studying music abroad for the past four years.

The city of Portland has increased in population from 20,000 to 250,000 during Mr. Strout's residence there, and is one of the greatest export cities of the coast. Many changes have occurred in Janesville during the past thirty years and the old-time resident who comes back to look up old friends finds that many of them have departed on their long journey. This is Mr. Strout's experience. He is stopping at the Grand Hotel and will spend a day or two in the city before going west.

IS WOMAN WOMAN'S PEER? NO, INDEED!

Mrs. Bertha Williams.

A San Francisco court has just decided the interesting question: Who may be a woman's peer? The state constitution says that a man shall be tried by a jury of his peers. The word man has been construed to include woman. Now a San Francisco woman on trial for extortion, Mrs. Bertha Williams, has asked for a jury of women on the novel ground that women are her peers. After taking six days to think over, the judge sitting in the case has concluded that women are not women's peers at least so far as the trial of law cases is concerned.

FAMOUS AMERICAN INDIANS

ALBERT PATSON TERHUNE
CRAZY HORSE.

Through a village of the Ogalalla Sioux dashed a pony, crazed by fright. A baby boy had just been born in the village, and the appearance of the maddened pony was taken by the infant's parents as an omen. So the new born child was named "Crazy Horse."

(Among various Indian tribes it has always been the custom to give each child the name of the first object on which its mother's eyes happen to fall after the baby's birth. This accounts for such odd Indian titles as "Crazy Horse," "Poor Dog," "White Steer," "Gold Dollar," "Ridge Pole," "Boiling Kettle," etc.)

Crazy Horse from the first hated civilization and was the sworn enemy of the government. He stirred up the southern Sioux to keep on leading their old-time wild life and to refuse to settle on any reservation. In consequence he speedily found himself the leader of hundreds of "bad" Indians, both of his own and of other tribes. He was the firebrand of the whole frontier. More than once, by superior strength, the government succeeded in checking and even imprisoning him. But he would never admit himself conquered, and always—until the last tragic episode of his fierce life—managed to wriggle free and to resume his career of bloodshed.

The Sioux Revolution.

In 1875 many tribes of the Sioux and of some allied "nations" went on the warpath. Their Black Hills lands were stolen from them by the white men. Government agents had maltreated and cheated them. Altogether they deemed it better to plunder, at will and, if need be, to die fighting rather than to starve or be cheated on reservations.

Up to this time Crazy Horse had confined his warlike efforts for the most part to conflicts with Crow, Mandan and other tribes hostile to the Sioux, and to raids on poorly defended white settlements. In such exploits he had won fame and had learned generalship. Now he became one of the principal war chiefs of the whole uprising, scarce second in importance to Sitting Bull himself.

During a blizzard in the winter of 1875 General Reynolds, at the head of a force of regulars, made a sudden attack on Crazy Horse's camp. The general sought to cripple the Indians there by capturing all their ponies. For without a pony an Indian is of little value on the warpath. The ponies were caught by the troops and were herded together. But Crazy Horse and members of his band rushed through the blinding snow, past the guards, straight into the captured herd, waving blankets, screaming, firing guns and altogether making such wild uproar and confusion that the whole panic-stricken herd burst through the line of soldiers and stamped into the prairie. The Indians, following the escaped ponies' trail far more quickly and easily than could the troopers, soon caught up with their steeds, mounted them and rode to safety.

General Crook followed up Crazy Horse's band, and first came upon them at Rosebud river, in Montana. There Crazy Horse and his 800 "braves" charged the soldiers with such ferocity and knowledge of savage tactics that Crook, after a furious battle, was beaten back. This battle added vastly to Crazy Horse's fame. New Indian recruits daily flocked to his camp. Hundreds fled from the reservations and joined him. He soon had a mighty horde of braves under his command.

He marched with his warriors to join Sitting Bull's red army. It was these two united bands that met and crushed Custer's troops at the Little Big Horn on June 25, 1876. Sitting Bull found his way to Canada after this campaign. But Crazy Horse and his followers, hotly pursued by General Miles, went back to Rosebud river, where they had defeated Crook. General Mackenzie fell upon Crazy Horse's camp and, with some loss of men, succeeded in destroying it.

The Last Battle.

Crazy Horse then retreated toward the Big Horn mountains, trying in vain to shake off Miles' close pursuit. At length Miles caught up with him, and a terrible battle ensued. The soldiers could scarcely withstand the savages' headlong charges until the artillery was brought up. Then the bombardment of shells broke the Indian formation to pieces. Unable to cope with such overpowering odds as cannon and galling, Crazy Horse was forced to retreat.

The following spring he and his followers were captured and placed on a reservation. He at once set to work planning a new outbreak. The government heard of his plot and sent a squad of men secretly to arrest him. On September 7, 1877, he was overpowered and seized. He wrenched himself free from the guard and while making a dash for freedom was shot dead.

CHALONER CRAZY? READ LOVELY POEM. "THREE FLIES," DECIDE FOR YOURSELF

John Armstrong Chaloner writing poetry.

John Armstrong Chaloner, member of the wealthy Chaloner family of New York, who has been declared crazy by the courts of the Empire state and sane by the courts of Virginia, is trying to prove through his attorneys to the New York courts that he is sane. His lawyers introduced in court a book of poems written by him. In one of his effusions, "Three Flies," Chaloner speaks of the little insects that we await in summer as leading "the wholesome things, as wholesome beings should."

MARION ELEANOR DODD

By RICHARD STRONG.

Many indeed are the sins of the telephone girl—and rightly so. And general indeed is the recognition of these sins by the public. But perhaps telephone girls are aggravated beyond the lot of other mortals, and their good acts are not always recognized as are those which destroy the peace of mind of the telephone public.

For instance, if Marion Eleanor Dodd, an operator at ten per week, had not been full of charity and love for human kind, at least one case of true love would have miscarried and at least two hearts would have gone over the falls.

It became the duty of Marion Eleanor one day to connect Charles Dudley Smythe and Fannie Mayme Kirtion on her wires. From the first intonation of Fannie Mayme's voice as she answered Charles Dudley's inquiry as to her health the operator realized that something was wrong. The brief conversation which it was her sad privilege to hear confirmed her first realization. Charles Dudley was all apology and reconciliation. Fannie Mayme was all coldness and reserve. "How mean!" thought Marion Eleanor to herself.

Now the relations of Charles Dudley Smythe and Fannie Mayme Kirtion were town gossip—more than town gossip, for they were of the very essence of the town life. The twain had mutually fallen in love, literally at first sight their courtship thus far had been a dream. He ardent and compelling, she tender and receptive. Both proud of the other.

This was their first quarrel, so judged the telephone girl, and judged correctly. It gave her a distinct shock when in answer to Charles Dudley's greeting Fannie Mayme replied in icy tones:

"Well, Mr. Smythe."

There was evident apprehension in the voice of Charles Dudley as he rejoined.

"I beg your pardon for disturbing you, Fannie."

"Miss Kirtion, if you please," came an interruption.

"Yes, exactly, I mean Miss Kirtion. I called you up because I wanted to make amends for anything I may have done or said last night which may have seemed offensive. I—I was a trifle piqued at your attitude toward that matter and—and—well, really, I did not mean to be rude or anything, you know."

Her answer came in the same chilly tones.

"There is nothing whatever to explain or apologize for, I assure you, Mr. Smythe. I think the less said about our little difference of opinion the better for all concerned. I beg you to excuse me, as I am very busy."

Then both receivers dropped with two very decided clunks.

This episode haunted the telephone girl for the days and weeks which followed, but she spoke no word of it to any human being.

The days went by and the town began to take notice of the estrangement. It began to be whispered that Charles Dudley and Fannie Mayme were seen together no more. Nobody but Marion Eleanor understood the matter at all and she was mum as the traditional church mouse.

Then came her great opportunity. Charles Dudley and a friend were on the wire one day and in answer to some question as to his down-heartedness, Charles Dudley told of his estrangement from Fannie Mayme and broke into the most impassioned protestations of love and despair and self-accusation.

Now it so happened at the very moment when this flood of Charles Dudley's heart's blood broke loose, Marion Eleanor had Fannie Mayme on the wire waiting for a number. Now the telephone girl, being a woman herself, had a very clear idea of a woman's point of view and she already had figured it out. Fannie Mayme would have been glad of a reconciliation if it could come about in a manner so she would do the pardoning and the man would be properly humbled.

Instantly she recognized her opportunity and with Napoleonic rapidity she grasped it. She cut Fannie Mayme into the conversation between Charles Dudley and his friend.

When it was over she cut out the friend and said sharply to Fannie Mayme:

"There's your number."

There was a preliminary skirmish of questions and answers before Fannie Mayme finally discovered that she was connected with Charles Dudley, and the friend was out. Then Fannie Mayme said:

"You're a great goose to talk that sort of thing into a telephone for half the town to hear. If you have anything to say to me would it not be wise to come over and tell it to me. You know how dreadfully inquisitive and gossip these horrid telephone operators are anyway, and they say that snippy little Dodd's girl never misses an opportunity to make trouble if she can get people by the ears."

Both receivers dropped again with two thuds and while Charles Dudley hastened to the side of Fannie Mayme, that the blizz and cooing might again begin, Marion Eleanor sighed and muttered into the ear of a waiting telephone:

"Now, wouldn't that jar you!"

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

A TITLE FOR MARRIED MEN.

WESTERN woman has recently astonished her acquaintances by calmly prefixing "Mrs." to her name. There is no "Mr." in the case. She has simply become tired of being called "Miss" and decided to be "Mrs." in the future.

Of course the self-made "Mrs." has been asked what is the reason for her unusual action and she has promptly countered by asking her questioners why she shouldn't do this. Why, she says, "should a woman's marital relations be advertised in this way to everyone she meets, and who hears her name spoken? Men don't have to be labeled bachelors or bachelorettes every time their names are uttered. Why should women be tagged in this way?"

Don't you think her objections are logical?

I do.

But I don't think I wholly like her solution of them. Some years ago a similar question arose as to why married women should go about the world labeled as wives by their wedding rings, and married men should wear no such label, although of the two, men certainly need the label the most, since they have always been more apt to pose as unmarried. Now, following the logic of the western lady, unmarried women would have taken to wearing the wedding ring in order to confuse the issue. You know what has actually happened. Equality in this matter is being established by the use of the wedding ring by both sexes. In two-thirds of the weddings which I have attended in the last ten years, the beautiful double ring service has been used, and whereas twenty-five years ago it was the custom for a man to wear a wedding ring, it attracts no attention whether he is married or not. Isn't this a much better way to even things up than to take all its meaning away from the wedding ring in order that woman might not be unfairly labeled?

I think so, and I wish this same thing might be extended to the engagement ring. Now don't scoff at that. There were plenty of people twenty-five years ago who scoffed at the idea of wedding rings for men. Who knows but twenty-five years from now it will be as common for an engaged man to wear some sort of a pledge of betrothal as it is today for married men to wear the wedding pledge.

Suppose then we solve our bachelor lady's trouble in the same way, and instead of doing away with the title of "Mrs." or letting unmarried women assume it at will, suppose we invent a corresponding title for married males; have them put it on their cards, address them by it and introduce them by it wherever they are. Surely no logical argument against that. The man who would object to it would probably be the one who needed it most.

HEART and HOME PROBLEAS

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—I am a girl of eighteen and have light hair and a good complexion. My face is not oily, but my nose always gets red and greasy. What can I do for it as it looks very bad? (2)—What color could I wear best? (3)—Is it a disgrace to live in the country. Some girls think it is. (4)—Is it a disgrace to be a working girl? (5)—I live at home and I earn seven dollars a week. How much of this should I save? (6)—Do you believe in spending all the money you earn for dresses and good times? (7)—What will remove blemishes? (8)—I am small and young looking for my age. Is this an advantage or disadvantage?

ANSWER.—(1)—For a red nose, have the drug-mix for you: 1 dram powdered salicylic acid, 30 grains zinc oxide, 1/2 dram glycerine, 1 oz. cherry laurel water. Shake it well before using, then mop it on the nose morning and evening. (2)—I should think any of the delicate shades would look well on you. (3)—No. (4)—No. (5)—It is only a very ignorant person who would think it a disgrace to live in the country. (6)—It is an honor to be a working girl. (7)—If you live at home you should save the most of it. I hope you give some to your parents for their care of you. If you lived any other place you would have to pay for board and room and laundry you know, and not have the privileges you have at home. (8)—I believe in pretty dresses and a good time, but I don't believe in spending all one earns on these things. You can make pretty dresses yourself of inexpensive material, and there are lots of good times that don't use up all your money.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Things Worth Knowing.—Common olive oil is a sure cure for snake bites. Use both externally and internally. Give the patient a teaspoonful of oil every hour while the nausea lasts. Dip pieces of cotton two inches square, in the oil, and lay the saturated cloth over the wound. In twenty minutes or less bubbles and froth will begin to appear on the surface of the cloth. Remove the square, burn it and replace it with a fresh square until all the swelling has subsided.

Japanned trays and boxes should be washed with a sponge dampened in warm water, and then dried immediately with a soft cloth. Spots may be removed by rubbing with a woolen cloth dipped in a little sweet oil.

Be sure to carefully inspect the inside of each tin top of your supply of jelly glasses. A mere pin-head of rust may mean a spoiled glass of jelly.

A bag of cotton flannel with a ruffle inserted between the bottom seam can be tied to the broom brush by means of a tape draw string. Such a home-made implement is much better than the brushes made especially for the purpose, as the ruffle can be pushed into an obscure corner and usually returns with a surprising load of dust.

The Table.—Strawberry Jam or Preserve. Make a rich syrup of granulated sugar; to a quart of berries take a pint of sugar for syrup. Boil until brittle in water, throw in berries and boil rapidly for twenty minutes. Butter seal or put in glasses.

Ice Cream Cake.—One-half cup of butter, one cup sugar, one-half cup of cold water, two cups cake flour, whites of five eggs, two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon each of cream and almond extract. Cream butter and sugar together, add water, then flour sifted three times with baking powder, put in stiffly whipped whites of eggs, last the flavoring. Do not stir until all is in. Bake in two layers.

Icing for Cream Cake.—Two cups of sugar, one cup of water, one-half teaspoon cream of tartar, whites of two eggs. Boil water and sugar together with cream of tartar until mixture threads when dropped from spoon; then pour slowly on the beaten whites of the eggs and beat until all are smooth. Spread on cake when it is cold.

Lima Beans, Southern.—Use a quart of freshly shelled lima beans and parboil them in salted water for twenty minutes. Then place them in a fresh, cool water, after draining, again drain them and put in a saucepan with a lump of butter of good size salt, pepper and nutmeg to taste. Cook for five minutes, stirring well, moisten with cream, add a little chopped parsley, mix well together and serve.

SALADS AND SALAD MAKING.

It is to be deplored that so many of our people must be persuaded against their wills to eat salads dressed with oil. Good sweet olive oil is wholesome, very nourishing and digestible. For this people who resist to put on fat, there is no easier method than the eating of olive oil on salads daily.

Mayonnaise dressing, the great favorite of oil lovers, is a dressing which will keep indefinitely, and is good on all kinds of salads except those which include rich meats or fish.

French dressing, which is quickly and easily made, is the dressing which is more often served. One part vinegar to three parts oil is usually sufficient for most palates. Salt and pepper to taste, varying the flavor with different seasonings. Chopped onion, tomato catsup, Worcestershire or Tabasco sauce.

Tomatoes cut in slices after peeling and leaped with finely minced onion, and served with French dressing makes a most enjoyable salad.

Lyman Salad.—This is not new, but is a most appetizing salad. Cut in halves lengthwise long green peppers, remove the seeds and fill with grapefruit pulp, celery and apple cut fine, using half as much celery and apple as of grape fruit, and mixing with broken pecan meats, allowing three nut meats to each case. Arrange on lettuce leaves and garnish with mayonnaise dressing.

Here is another which never seems to wane in popularity: Remove the skins and seeds from white grapes, add equal quantity of celery cut fine, a few walnut meats, and serve on lettuce with either a boiled or a mayonnaise dressing.

A most delicious salad is prepared by cutting small round tomatoes in half, remove some of the pulp and fill with chopped onion and finely diced cucumber sprinkled generously with parsley and mixed with French dressing.

Store Apples in Dry Sand. A box of fresh dry sand is an excellent thing to have in a corner of the storeroom or pantry. If apples are carefully packed in the sand they will keep fresh and unshriveled for months.

Chilled Clam Broth.—Make one, and one-half quarts of clam broth and chill in the usual fashion, setting in the ice box until wanted. Within one-half cup of heavy cream until stiff, flavoring with a little celery salt and coloring with paprika to taste. When serving in papillon cups put a large spoonful of the whipped cream on top of each cup.

Planked Lobsters.—Split small chicken lobsters, allowing one lobster for each two persons, and put in a dripping pan. Brush the shells over with olive oil or melted butter and bake fifteen minutes in a hot oven. Remove to the plank arrange on this in a bed of watercress and garnish with slices of peeled tomatoes, julienne potatoes crisp and hot, slices of cucumber and parsley.

Make a sauce of melted butter, seasoned with salt, pepper and lemon juice, to pour over the lobsters. Some people consider the covering of the lobster meat with buttered crumbs an addition to the dish, but this is optional.

Tournedos of Lamb, Rissolo Potatoes.—Six kidney lamb chops cut two inches thick will be required. Remove the bone and fat and with skewers arrange in six circular pieces—around each wrap a thin strip of bacon, fastening in place with wooden skewers. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, place on a well-greased broiler and broil over a clear fire about fifteen minutes. Remove to a hot platter, garnish with rissolo potatoes and pass a jelly with them.

The potatoes are done in this way:

RESINOL CURED AWFUL ERUPTION ALL OVER FACE

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 2, 1913.—"About eighteen months ago I noticed a lot of little sores spreading all over my face and neck. It itched me something awful, and I felt like I would want to tear my face apart. At night it would pain me and start swelling—then it would swell all the more—so I got very little sleep."

"I tried many treatments, such as salicylic acid, etc., but none of them did me any good. I suffered for fourteen months until I sent for samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. I applied them to a little part of my face and it showed good results. So at once bought a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap from my druggist and kept on using them for about three months, when was completely cured. If you would see my face now you would never think anything was ever the matter with it." Signed Louis Bloch, 35 Morrell St.

For eighteen years Resinol has been a favorite doctor's prescription and household remedy for skin eruptions, pimples, black heads, sunburn, insect bites, dandruff, corns, piles, etc. Stops itching instantly. Every druggist sells Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment; but you can try them without cost—just write for samples to Dept. 44-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

MIRACLES A PORTION OF EVERY DAY LIFE

MULTIPLICATION OF LOAVES HAS ITS COUNTERPARTS IN EVERY HARVEST.

MAN OFTEN FORGETFUL

The Rev. Dean E. E. Reilly exhorts hearers to remember and express gratitude for blessings.

"The miracle of the feeding of the five thousand, the multiplication of the loaves and the fishes, has its counterpart in every harvest, and upon them we are dependent for our very existence," said the Rev. Dean E. E. Reilly, in his sermon delivered to his parishioners yesterday morning in St. Patrick's church.

"God performs for us miracles every day," continued the Rev. Reilly, "greater than the one related in the passage of scripture that I have just read. We are tempted to forget our dependence upon his bounty, to attribute our prosperity and success to our industry and ability, unmindful of the fact that should he withhold his gifts of divine providence, the rains and the warmth and the sunshine, not only would we suffer, but the very spark of our life would be out. Let us never forget that God gives the harvest and ceases to offer up thanks for his benefits.

"If God Almighty gives us all that we have, ought we not to do something in return? Should we not feel called upon to show him the gratitude that he has shown to us? Should we not feel that we are but the instruments of his providence? What are we doing to recognize this goodness? Too many of us forget this responsibility, become self-sufficient and vain, and even blaspheme their Maker and Provider.

"The Lord not only gives us material blessings, but spiritual blessings, for the salvation of our souls. He keeps us mindful of the fact that blessings of this world are but for a time, and shall pass away, that the things of the Spirit are eternal, unchanging, and wholly striving for. This bread that he gives us for the nourishment of our spiritual life, of his own body and blood and his last gift to man before his death. What more could an infinite God do for us than what he has done?

"For the strength that we need to overcome temptation we must depend upon that which God gives us in His promises and His ministrations. He has established His church to help and guide us on our way to a happy eternity, and continues to guard and preserve it throughout the ages, offering to every generation the blessings of His body and blood in the Holy Sacrament.

"You are expected to say a morning and an evening prayer of thanks and supplication. Do you do it, or say them hurriedly and unthinkingly? Fail not in this duty and privilege. The world is full of distractions and evil influences; some of us are drawn to iniquity as the moths to the candle, and to stand firm and unwavering will have to lay hold on the strength that only God can give.

"You have a free will. God will not force you to accept what he offers. He will not force you to be good for them. He would reward you. You are free to choose between good and evil, between life and death, between the service of God and the service of Satan. Let your choice indicate that you are a child of God."

The Rev. Dean Reilly closed his sermon with an invocation to remember the bounty and blessings of God and give thanks to their source.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

THE LAWN MOWER.

By Howard L. Rann.

The lawn mower is a graceful implement which, when pursued with feverish energy by a tall, bow-legged property owner without collar, necktie or suspenders makes a pleasing landscape decoration. It is used to reduce the growth of brush on the front lawn and make it so that a man can play croquet on it without having to hunt for the end stakes.

When a man has a lawn mower for the first time he is filled with enthusiasm and circulates around the premises with it on the dead run, finally bringing up against a cone from a pine tree and having his breastbone set back several inches. After a few of these cones have caught in the teeth of the mower and thrown him over the handlebars, his enthusiasm will ooze away at a rapid gait and he will decide to stick to his profession.

It is harder to plow a straight furrow with a dull lawn mower than it is to drive a dropping-lipped mule on a hay-line. Many a man has been called grossly for life in the attempt to square a lawn mower with a telephone pole out in the road and has come into the house looking like a small boy returning from a three-ring circus.

The lawn mower has teeth which catch everything that comes along and refuse to let go until somebody has been maimed in the region of the stomach. It is excellent exercise to push a lawn mower through grass that is knee deep, as it chokes up every few feet and has to be pounded on the back until it can draw a full breath.

People who have gotten into the habit of waking up at an unearthly hour, during the summer, invariably rush out to the woodshed before breakfast and gallop up and down next to some neighbor's sleeping porch with a lawn mower that hasn't been oiled since infancy. Between times, in order to be sure that everybody in the block is awake they will drag the mower over a cement walk on its hind legs, causing it to scream agony at every step. This is a reprehensible machine and ought to be taken in hand by the grand jury.

The Unreturning Step.

There is much in an unreturning step. Stanley every morning began where he left off the night before. He explored Africa. The postman today began where he began yesterday; he renewed acquaintance with Tompkins square.

MOEHLLENPAH NAMED AS BANKER'S HEAD

Clinton Man is Honored With Nomination Which Means Election by State Bankers' Association.

Henry A. Moehlenpah of the Citizens' state banks at Clinton will be the next president of the Wisconsin Bankers' association. At a session of the nominating committee held on board the North American on which the annual meeting of the association is being held, the nomination of officers was held which means the election of the president and the first vice-president and J. A. Jamison of Shullsburg for treasurer.

The members of the nominating committee are: W. A. Blackburn, of Bruce; Charles O'Neill of Madison; F. E. Becker of Kaukauna; S. M. Smith of Janesville; E. A. Krembs of Merrill; J. A. Bayer of La Crosse and J. J. Hughes of Milwaukee.

The North American was fitted to its capacity with Wisconsin bankers and members of their families when it left the dock at Milwaukee on Saturday night for a three days' cruise during which time will be held the twenty-first annual convention of the association.

The meetings commenced immediately after the boat left the Soo this morning. "Banking Customs versus Banking Laws" by Thomas B. Falcon, county counsel for the American Bankers' association was the principal address of the first session. Following the annual reports of officers and an invocation by the Rev. Paul B. Jenkins, pastor of Immanuel Presbyterian church. This afternoon the report of the committee on insurance of bank deposits was read by Chairman H. A. Moehlenpah, Clinton, and discussed.

A Business Man's Review of Business Conditions in Wisconsin by George A. Buckstaff, president of the Buckstaff-Edwards company, Oshkosh, will open the Tuesday afternoon session which will conclude with a report of the resolutions committee and elections of officers.

This meeting will be the last of the convention, although members of the American Bankers' association will meet immediately after adjournment to elect a vice-president for Wisconsin and a member of the nominating committee to serve at the Boston national convention in October. It is planned to return to Milwaukee early Tuesday night.

The Wisconsin Bankers' association is stronger at the present time than at any time in its history, according to the annual reports of the secretary. The membership roll is 792, a gain of 37 in a year. The total receipts the past year aggregated $14,437.43 with disbursements of $8,762.64, leaving a balance of $7,674.79.

FARMERS NEAR CLINTON OPPOSE ELECTRIC ROAD

Efforts to Secure a Right of Way for Deloit to Delavan Line Are Meeting Opposition.

Prospects of building the Deloit to Delavan electric line through Clinton are not particularly promising at present, owing to the fact that farmers along the proposed right of way are unwilling to sign unless they receive pecuniary consideration. Information from J. F. Kemmerer of Clinton.

Mr. Kemmerer is one of a committee appointed to see property owners and secure their co-operation in the matter. He says, "some farmers seem to think that the company and the members of the committee are making money out of the enterprise. Mr. Kemmerer says that nothing is to be gained from the truth can be imagined. He cites that the express conditions made by the company is that a right of way shall be given and that the company shall put no expense in securing the signatures of property owners for filing articles of incorporation with the secretary of state.

The committee is hearing these expenses and does not expect remuneration for making anything out of the enterprise. It comes the other way—they are out of pocket and donate their time besides.

It appears to be the history of this class of railroads that the lines are built where the least opposition is encountered. It is not necessary that the road be built on the Deloit, Clinton and Delavan highway. It can almost as well be put through Shopiere, Avalon, Fairfield and Darien.

SPECIAL TRIBUTE TO LATE JUSTICE LYON

Janesville Friends of the Deceased Will Read With Interest Tribute Paid.

Diane Mowry, who contributes a leading article in The Green Bag, Boston for June, on the late Chief Justice Lyon, of the Wisconsin supreme court, makes the following estimate of his judicial career: "Justice Lyon's record on the bench of the highest court in Wisconsin was above reproach and highly honorable, if not pre-eminent. It is quite possible that that record was by comparison somewhat dimmed by reason of the greater ability, not to say brilliancy, of some of his associates, particularly Chief Justices Dixon, Ryan and Orton. Nevertheless, his judicial career was characterized by industry, integrity, and a firm and steadfast purpose to administer legal justice in accordance with law and the rules of the court. He was an exceptionally conscientious judge and his opinions are absolutely free from the external influences which have sometimes been exerted upon courts."

Mr. Lyon was a member of the Wisconsin assembly in 1859 and 1860. He was the speaker in the last named session. He was district attorney of Racine (his home) county, and was the circuit judge prior to his appointment to position on the supreme bench. He was the captain of a company in the Eighth—the Eagle—regiment, and at a later date was the colonel of the Thirtieth regiment. He was mustered out of the volunteer service as a brigadier-general. He was, for several years after his retirement from the bench, of the supreme court in 1894, a member of the state board of control.

INSTANT POSTUM

This pure food drink, sold by grocers everywhere, is warranted pure and absolutely free from the coffee drug, caffeine. It feeds and nourishes where coffee destroys the tissues.

Instant Postum is made of prime wheat and the juice of sugar cane, roasted and blended to produce a flavor much resembling high-grade Java.

A level teaspoonful of Instant Postum in an ordinary cup of hot water dissolves instantly, and makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular Postum (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water.

And he hung himself from the room as Miss Mazurek collapsed in a chair. But as Kayton approached she staggered to her feet and all but fell in his arms.

"Help us, help us!" she implored feverishly. "Don't say he came back here! I was wrong—I am sure I was! He says he didn't come! Please don't tell any one! What have I done? What have I done?"

Kayton took a firm grip on the slender shoulders with his two strong hands, straightened the girl's clinging form and gazed into her face gravely, but kindly.

"I want you to pull yourself together," he ordered in a tone of authority. "I'm going to need you—I'm counting on you. We need you."

"Oh, I can't!" moaned the girl. "Yes, you can," he interrupted grimly. "You're not that sort of a girl. You want to clear him, don't you, as much as he wants to clear you?"

"Oh, yes, yes! Oh, yes!" "Well, then, that's all right!" he declared heartily, giving the shoulders a rather vigorous pat as he released them. "You go to your room. I'll let you know when I need you."

He turned abruptly away as if to indicate that the matter was closed for the present, and Miss Mazurek dragged herself slowly, uncertainly to the door. Just before she passed out he called her by name, and she turned miserably toward him. He walked up swiftly and again placed his hands on her shoulders.

"Before you go," he said gravely, "I want you to promise me that you won't worry any more. I can't say definitely as yet who is responsible for all this, but I can tell you this much—I know that neither you nor Bruce had anything to do with it."

It is given to few men to win, with a few more words, the reward in overwhelming joy and gratitude that leaped to the eyes of the miserable girl. "You do," she gasped incredulously. He nodded slowly and smiled.

"Oh, oh!" There was a rush of soba. "Thank you, Mr. Kayton." And she was gone. When Manning returned some minutes later he found his chief staring vacantly up the deserted hall. He coughed and gained no attention.

"H'm!" he repeated a little more loudly. "Have you got anything yet I can work on, governor?" Kayton came back to his job with a start.

"Wh-what?" he demanded, with a frown. "I say," repeated Manning deliberately, "have you got anything I can work on?"

"Yes," replied Kayton, with a swift change to his wonted alertness. "Call up Wilkie, Joe."

"Chief Wilkie, Washington!" exclaimed Manning in surprise. "Yes," snapped his chief sharply. "Did you think the secret service had moved? 6400 Main."

While Manning was deep in a subdued but heated argument with the long distance operator Kayton busied himself with the finger prints.

"Did you get the woman's thumb prints under the edge here, Joe?" he called out.

"Yes, sir," replied the young man, with his hand over the mouthpiece. "The right hand one came out fine—perfect! Is it the girl?" he added as his chief subjected her after sheet to a close scrutiny under his powerful pocket lens.

"No," replied Kayton curtly. "Is she in the bunch?" Inquired Manning after another minute's wait, in which he swore fluently but guardedly at the telephone company, its works, equipment and operating staff.

Kayton dropped the sheets of paper on the table and looked up with a queer light in his eyes. "Joe," he said, "this woman came from the outside."

Manning whistled into the telephone and hastily slipped his hand over the mouthpiece again. "Gee!" he grunted. "That's a big order. Hello! Is the chief in? Mr. Kayton wants to speak to him. Here he is, governor. Just a minute!"

"Cover the doors, Joe!" ordered Kayton, taking the phone. Manning swiftly and quietly opened both doors, peered about, and then stepped out into the hall.

"Hello, chief!" said Kayton distinctly, but in a somewhat guarded tone. "Oh, hard at work! Have you any record of a counterfeit $100 gold certificate—E9737-E-9-7-3—Don't you get it? I can't very well. A. R. C. D. E. I. Yes, that's it. Series of 1907. Yes, that's it. You haven't?

Well, I've got one here that I thought might be bad. No-o, but it's a little light. If it's counterfeit it's the best one I've seen. No. They must must have bleached to get the paper. The head's a corker. Well, I'll turn it over to the New York office. Oh, no! It's a little murder. No, thanks. Thank you very much, chief. Goodbye."

CHAPTER VIII. "Trail Hurley!"

KAYTON sat examining the bill until Manning returned with the announcement that Mr. Hurley was coming. Kayton slipped the banknote into his pocket.

"Let him in," he said. Mr. Hurley returned more largely patronizing than ever.

"Well, how is the mystery getting along, Mr. Kayton?" he inquired, accepting a cigar the detective offered him and puffing it happily.

Kayton paused, lighted match in hand, and looked up at him with a little smile of surprise.

"Mystery!" he exclaimed. "Why there's no such thing as a mystery if you use a little common sense, Mr. Hurley. You know, in an affair of this sort, you're confronted by a long line of facts, and you hammer away until you break through somewhere." He lit his cigar and took a puff. "Mr. Hurley, when you first met Mr. Argyle—By the way, how did you meet Mr. Argyle?"

"Mr. Hurley carefully brushed the ashes off his cigar and examined the end of it critically.

"Well, now, Mr. Kayton, I'll tell you about that," he said slowly. "I had a western proposition in which I wanted to interest him, and I went to his office, and he proved to be a very approachable man. I laid the matter before him in the usual way. He took it up, investigated it, found it was what I had said it was, and we got together on it. I suppose that gave him confidence in me. Are you through here?" he inquired as Kayton picked up his hat and slipped on a light overcoat.

"Yes," replied the detective. "Call me up in the morning if I can be of any help to you," offered the lawyer, also making ready to leave.

"I'll be in Pittsburgh," said Kayton briefly.

"Oh! You are going away?" Mr. Hurley was interested.

"Yes, for the day. My operatives have just rounded up a case there, and I've got to see the man and pull him across. Expect to take the night train back."

"I'll see you the day after tomorrow, then," said the lawyer with a nod of farewell as he walked slowly out.

"Yes, do," said Kayton. The detective buttoned his overcoat, ran his eye about the room again as if to make sure he had overlooked nothing and then turned to his assistant with a brief command:

"Joe, trail Hurley!" Manning was not an easily surprised young man, but now his jaw almost dropped with amazement.

"Wh-what?" he exclaimed. "Hurley?" Kayton chewed his cigar, and an amused gleam came to the corners of his eyes as he surveyed his assistant.

"Haven't you been listening to him?" he asked.

"No, not particularly," Manning admitted.

"Well, you should have," commented his chief grimly. "That's your business. He's way off from normal. When a man says 'Now I'll tell you about that' it's one safe bet he's lying. Trail him!"

Ten seconds later the lawyer had an ever invisible but ever present shadow. Contrary to the copy book wisdom on the subject, swift action is not a habit. Persons who habitually hurry are merely tussy. They seldom accomplish much beyond an appearance of activity which is deceiving to the unversed, and they also succeed in getting real workmen nervous and irritated. Such people are worse than useless in a crisis. It is the even tempered man who conserves his energy aids. "Kayton stripped off overcoat and gloves, hung his hat and turned to his desk, rubbing his hands to get the morning chill out of the fingers.

"Is Cortwright out there?" he inquired without further formality.

"Yes," said Cortwright. "Send him in."

Leischmann disappeared and there came presently into the office a man of about forty who might have been cashier of a reliable bank. He was well dressed. His face was round and honest. His eyes were bright and his speech and gaze were direct and straightforward.

"Good morning, governor," he said pleasantly, but respectfully.

"Good morning, Cortwright," returned his chief, looking up with a cheerful smile. "Tell me about this report on the Argyle case." His hand fell on a mass of typewritten manuscript.

"Well, we've run out all the inside servants," said Cortwright, "and the cook and the chauffeur. Nothing wrong there at all. We've found the policeman that was on the beat. He has nothing. We looked up some of the discharged servants—a coachman. Nothing to that."

"All right. That's all," he nodded, and Cortwright withdrew.

Kayton picked up the receiver of a desk phone. "Send Joe in here," he ordered, and presently Manning walked in with a broad, red scratch like a birthmark on his cheek.

Kayton grinned at him. "Hello, Joe. Marked for identification?"

Manning slowly raised both hands to his face—one to feel tenderly, of the wound on his cheek and the other to carry to his teeth the apple he was eating.

"Picked that up trailing Hurley," he mumbled cheerily, his mouth full of fruit. "A fresh cop tried to follow me, and I fell down a fire escape."

"How about Hurley?" Manning shook his head dolefully.

"Nothing doing," he said. "Haven't been able to line him up with anything. We know Hurley's back better than his face. We take him out in the morning and trail him around from one office to another. He don't go into court. Nothing busy in his office but his telephone. We take him home and put him to bed at night—do everything but hear his prayers."

"Well, don't lose him. How about that fake personal?"

"It's planted in the morning paper," Manning fished one out of his overcoat pocket and opened it and gazed at it.

"Sure you got it right?" demanded his chief.

"Information wanted regarding 'N. M.' Beneficiary Argyle estate. Tolworth & Mead, St. Paul building," read Manning.

"Did the papers bite?" inquired Kayton.

"Well, one of the evening papers played it up yesterday. Their men beat it to Tolworth's, and when they couldn't find out anything they chickened in some more mystery about a new murder clue and a missing heir to the Argyle estate."

Kayton nodded happily. "Well, if she doesn't see the personal that stuff ought to reach her." The desk phone rang, and the attendant at the outer door informed him that Mr. Hurley was asking for Mr. Kayton. The de-

When he returned from Pittsburgh he did not know who had killed Mr. Argyle. He strongly suspected that Mr. Hurley knew more than he was telling, and his plans had been laid with a view to eliminating the lawyer or fastening guilt upon him. He did not know which would result. He was not guessing. He had not made up his mind that the lawyer was in the mesh of the true crime. So he had to make certain just where this figure stood in the game before he could proceed along new lines with certainty.

He was expected at his office the second morning after his departure for Pittsburgh, and the newspapers confirmed the report of his return. They confirmed it by telling in seven column headlines what he had done in Pittsburgh.

Leischmann, the manager, and Nash, a veteran aid of the great detective, who was allowed all sorts of privileges, were awaiting him in the private office and discussing the news from Pittsburgh when Kayton arrived.

The chief carried a little grip and also some few signs of two successive nights in a sleeping car, but he seemed as calmly energetic as ever.

"Hello, boys," he said, with a nod. "Morning, governor," responded his

Kayton picked up the receiver of a desk phone. "Send Joe in here," he ordered, and presently Manning walked in with a broad, red scratch like a birthmark on his cheek.

Kayton grinned at him. "Hello, Joe. Marked for identification?"

Manning slowly raised both hands to his face—one to feel tenderly, of the wound on his cheek and the other to carry to his teeth the apple he was eating.

"Picked that up trailing Hurley," he mumbled cheerily, his mouth full of fruit. "A fresh cop tried to follow me, and I fell down a fire escape."

"How about Hurley?" Manning shook his head dolefully.

"Nothing doing," he said. "Haven't been able to line him up with anything. We know Hurley's back better than his face. We take him out in the morning and trail him around from one office to another. He don't go into court. Nothing busy in his office but his telephone. We take him home and put him to bed at night—do everything but hear his prayers."

"Well, don't lose him. How about that fake personal?"

"It's planted in the morning paper," Manning fished one out of his overcoat pocket and opened it and gazed at it.

"Sure you got it right?" demanded his chief.

"Information wanted regarding 'N. M.' Beneficiary Argyle estate. Tolworth & Mead, St. Paul building," read Manning.

"Did the papers bite?" inquired Kayton.

"Well, one of the evening papers played it up yesterday. Their men beat it to Tolworth's, and when they couldn't find out anything they chickened in some more mystery about a new murder clue and a missing heir to the Argyle estate."

Kayton nodded happily. "Well, if she doesn't see the personal that stuff ought to reach her." The desk phone rang, and the attendant at the outer door informed him that Mr. Hurley was asking for Mr. Kayton. The de-

And Kayton's specialty was conserving and concentrating his energies.

When he returned from Pittsburgh he did not know who had killed Mr. Argyle. He strongly suspected that Mr. Hurley knew more than he was telling, and his plans had been laid with a view to eliminating the lawyer or fastening guilt upon him. He did not know which would result. He was not guessing. He had not made up his mind that the lawyer was in the mesh of the true crime. So he had to make certain just where this figure stood in the game before he could proceed along new lines with certainty.

He was expected at his office the second morning after his departure for Pittsburgh, and the newspapers confirmed the report of his return. They confirmed it by telling in seven column headlines what he had done in Pittsburgh.

Leischmann, the manager, and Nash, a veteran aid of the great detective, who was allowed all sorts of privileges, were awaiting him in the private office and discussing the news from Pittsburgh when Kayton arrived.

The chief carried a little grip and also some few signs of two successive nights in a sleeping car, but he seemed as calmly energetic as ever.

"Hello, boys," he said, with a nod. "Morning, governor," responded his
